

Schroder Global Recovery Fund

Wholesale class

The time for value is now

At a time when investment markets are in flux, investors may need to look beyond trends or themes and focus on the fundamental value of companies to generate returns.

The Schroder Global Recovery Fund focuses on companies with classic recovery characteristics – those that have suffered a setback in either profit or share price, but where long-term prospects are believed to be good and, therefore, potential shareholder returns are attractive. Holding value in a portfolio is key to diversifying from growth stocks and future-proofing investment portfolios against varying market cycles.

Benefits

Opportunity to capitalise on the performance of value

Valuation dispersion between the most expensive and cheapest shares remains at extreme levels today.

A true value investor

We use a contrarian approach to seek out sound businesses with long-term value potential we believe is not reflected in the share price. This approach results in exposure to companies with pure deep value 'recovery' characteristics.

Bottom up approach

We focus on individual businesses their underlying fundamentals rather than broad macro themes.

Benchmark unaware

Our process results in a portfolio that is significantly different from the main international benchmarks, giving you exposure to companies that many don't find.

Diversification from growth

Many investor portfolios lack style diversification. An allocation to value stocks provides investors with diversification throughout different market cycles.

An experienced team with a disciplined process

A team of eight investment professionals responsible for £12.4bn assets with an active value investment strategy and a contrarian approach to investing.

Why value?

Value investing is the art of buying stocks that trade at a significant discount to their intrinsic value. It seeks to exploit the irrational behaviour of emotional investors. Fear and greed frequently lead to poor investment decisions based on perception and emotion rather than reality. This results in short-term mis-pricings that are not justified over the longer term. Over almost 150 years, a value investment strategy has a consistent history of outperforming the market across multiple equity markets.

Why now?

Over the long-term value outperforms, but the road is seldom smooth. Following good periods, there have been tougher periods, and vice versa: following difficult periods the style has gone on to produce great returns. For much of the past decade Value has been out of favour. This means the market gap in fundamental valuations between the most highly rated shares and least rated shares is at extreme levels. In recent years we have seen the increasing evidence of the type of erratic behaviour that we typically see close to the top of growth investing cycles. With a high concentration of growth and quality stocks in equity allocations, it's an important time to consider value as a holding in portfolios to diversify and protect capital should a market rotation occur.
